

Cable Car for London (Emirates Air)

Project value

£60 Million

Project Scope

The Emirates Air Line (also known as the Thames cable car or dangleway) is a ten-minute (five minutes in rush hour) gondola lift link across the River Thames in London, built by Doppelmayr with sponsorship from the airline Emirates. The service opened on 28 June 2012. In addition to transport across the river, the service advertises "spectacular views of the city from heights of 90 metres as you travel between Greenwich Peninsula and the Royal Docks".

Additional comments

KSEL Staff Involvement

Independent reviewer of the Safety Case. Providing guidance and support in the production of the Systems Safety documentation.

Contact details for Kimberley Systems Engineering Limited

Jonathan Harding
+(44) 7974 566751
Jon.Harding@ksel.org.uk

Mukesh Sharma
+(44) 7979 905701
Mukesh.Sharma@ksel.org.uk